Eva Papastergiadou is a Professor of Ecology at the University of Patras, with an expertise on ecosystem-scale dynamics in freshwaters, functional diversity patterns, and processes of aquatic macrophytes assemblages. She has experience as key partner and National representative of Greece and Cyprus in WFD Intercalibration process, in many national and international projects on biodiversity conservation, shallow lakes functioning; monitoring and management of protected areas; organization of workshops and coordination of scientific working teams (e.g. Implementation of the Natura 2000 network, ecological quality assessment of inland waters, WFD 2000/60). Editorial Board member of eight international journals, and editor of three special issues. Her research interests focused on Freshwater Ecology, Conservation and Management included functional aspects of lake and river communities, environmental and climate changes on aquatic ecosystems functioning, evaluation of ecological quality, and dynamics of aquatic and riparian vegetation, patterns and processes structuring macrophyte assemblages at various spatial scales, biodiversity monitoring, impacts of human activities, and the effects of landscape structure and habitat quality on freshwater biodiversity.

Currently, she is a Director of the Environmental Sciences Lab of the School of Natural Sciences, of University of Patras, and Director of the Post Graduate programme of the Department of Biology named: "Applied Ecology and Environmental Management".
